

Free Books February 2016

College Writing 2.2x, edX.org

Q: How can I get one of these free books?

A: Click on one of the links for the books you want.

Q: But I don't have a Kindle!

A: You don't need a Kindle. You can download a free Kindle app from the Amazon store, and use it on any computer or smartphone, or you can choose a different store and a different application program. Google whatever device you have and "epub reader" and see what you can find. :) On the Smashwords site, you can also download books as .pdfs or even read them online.

Q: Are there any free paperbacks?

A: No. Authors don't have the ability to set the price of paperbacks to 0.00, and of course can't pay to ship them to you. But if you live near a library, there are lots of free paperbacks there!

Q: I'm interested in one of the books, but I have no time now. Can I download one now and read it later?

A: Yes, you can. However, if you see one that might be interesting to you, I suggest you download it now. These books are all free now, but there is no guarantee that they will always be free in the future.

Q: Why are these books free? Is it because they are terrible?

A: No! (Although different people like different kinds of books, of course.) These are all books by contemporary, independently published authors. From time to time, they make one of their ebooks free so that new readers can try them. They hope that if you like their work, you will buy other books from them in the future.

Q: What if I never buy any of their books in the future? Will they be angry?

A: Of course not. It's not a problem. You are still welcome to read these books for free.

Q: Is there any other way I can thank these authors, if I can't buy their books?

A: Yes! You can leave a review for the book on a site like Amazon or Apple or Google Play, to let other readers know your opinion. And what a good way to practice your English writing!

Q: Please tell the authors thank you for me.

A: I certainly will. :) Happy reading!
