ETHICAL REASONING 22x: JUSTICE

This course is an introduction to moral and political philosophy. It explores classical and contemporary theories of justice, and applies these theories to contemporary legal and political controversies. Topics include affirmative action, income distribution, same-sex marriage, the role of markets, debates about rights (human rights and property rights), arguments for and against equality, dilemmas of loyalty in public and private life. The course invites students to subject their own views on these controversies to critical examination.

The principal readings are texts by Aristotle, John Locke, Immanuel Kant, John Stuart Mill, and John Rawls. We also read some contemporary court cases and articles about political issues that raise philosophical questions.

Course lectures, readings, self-tests, and discussion

To get the most out of the course, students are encouraged to watch the lectures, to do as much of the reading as time and interest permit, and to participate in the online class discussions.

Students are also encouraged to assess their progress by taking the ungraded self-tests that follow each lecture.

Challenging your opinions and developing your moral reasoning

Each week, students are invited to offer their views on the moral dilemmas discussed in class by responding to a poll question. Once you submit your answer to a poll question, you will be able to see how your answer compares with the responses offered by other participants in the course. You will also be presented with a challenge to the view you have endorsed. See if you can offer a persuasive reply to the challenge, and then read the replies offered by others.

Earning a certificate of mastery

To receive a certificate of mastery, students must take five short quizzes each consisting of 5 multiple-choice questions and a final exam consisting of 25 multiple-choice questions. Each quiz counts for 5% of the overall grade with the final exam accounting for the remaining 75%. A total score of 60% or higher overall qualifies as a passing grade for the course. While you are encouraged, throughout the semester, to discuss the topics of the course with your friends and fellow students, you must do the quizzes and the final exam on your own, without consulting others. We strongly recommend that students take the five short quizzes in sequence, to assess their progress. For those who want to earn a certificate of mastery, all graded work (the five short quizzes and the final exam) must be completed by July 31st at 7 pm EDT (Eastern Daylight Time) (which is the same as 23:00 UTC (Coordinated Universal Time)).
